John Chrysostom, Sermon to the people of Antioch, 5, For there is not an equal amount of contempt involved in coveting an honor which does not pertain to one, and making light of it, but the latter exceeds the former as much as scorn differs from admiration.

This clerical order is kept as an office and stepping-stone toward the priest. But if any one should examine the things which belong to the dispensation of grace, he will find that, small as they are, yet are they fearful and full of awe, and that what was spoken concerning the law is true in this case also, that "what has been made glorious hath no glory in this respect by reason of the glory which excelleth. But Treatise on the Priesthood beseech thee, if there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love.

Inow told him that it would be best to postpone our decision concerning Treatise on the Priesthood. I will leave this issue to. A priest ought to be sober minded, and penetrating in discernment, and possessed of innumerable eyes in every direction, as one who lives not for himself alone but for so great a multitude.
