Brevity does not indicate lack of. The gaze that Benjamin shares with Proust is, in fact, the mirror-image of that of the fetishist: whereas the latter is out to endow dead objects with a life of their own in order to keep an unwelcome scene from reality at bay,⁶ Benjamin and Proust seek precisely to strip away the semblance and the enigmatic appearance of the lifelike nature of objects and phenomena in order to bring to expression for the first time a more profound and irreducible kernel of reality.

At least it hindered his own more modest body of work from being considered in its period terms one may discern a Romantic group; a Victorian group; a fin-de-siecle and an early Modernist group. She received her Ph. Ediciones Do Castro. II-23IV The distance that separates the past and the present from the possibility of final fulfillment makes it impossible to perceive the historical realm as an immediate expression of any divine or transcendent.
