Most of us are brought up from an early age to be cordial and accommodating. You have to engage in a fun conversation which aims to spark some initial emotional bits upon which further contact can be achieved.

Because your theories could be way off. I am very pretty and I have a good body. Yea I rarely get approached as I've gotten older when I was in HS it happened all the time. Same thing when I meet people after a short contact on an online dating site. I am rarely told I am pretty and mostly old people do it-out of politeness I think.

They will understand your struggle. God made us this way for a reason. You are probably perceptive so tell that girl that you fancy after salutations have been made that she looks beautiful like your favorite female heroine in fav, play, book, of your dreams and go on a tangent about why you love it. Many people end up finding a lot of bad fish in a bar financially poor, unproductive, rude, or crazy people.
