That is why great songs that are mixed well even from decades past continue to paint that memorable imagery every time we hear. So I don't think a more accurate vibrating-membrane technology will elevate the sound to the point where recorded music sounds like the real thing.

So keeping yours sustain lower is a great way to give your tracks some dynamic peak. Walmart currently has a solid deal on the Google Nest Hub you may want to check. It was slightly less annoying than with the Ice Cube song, but that actually worked against it.
